

BBC Global 30 Index

Europe, Asia and North America - the three power centres of the global economy combined in a single index, the BBC Global 30.

The BBC Global 30 Index is designed to capture the economic mood of the industrialised world. In all three regions we have selected the 10 most important industrial sectors; from each sector we have selected the largest listed company by stock market value.

Created by FTSE Group, the index portrays thirty companies from a wide range of industries and countries, and is used by the BBC to provide an indicator of global equity trends.

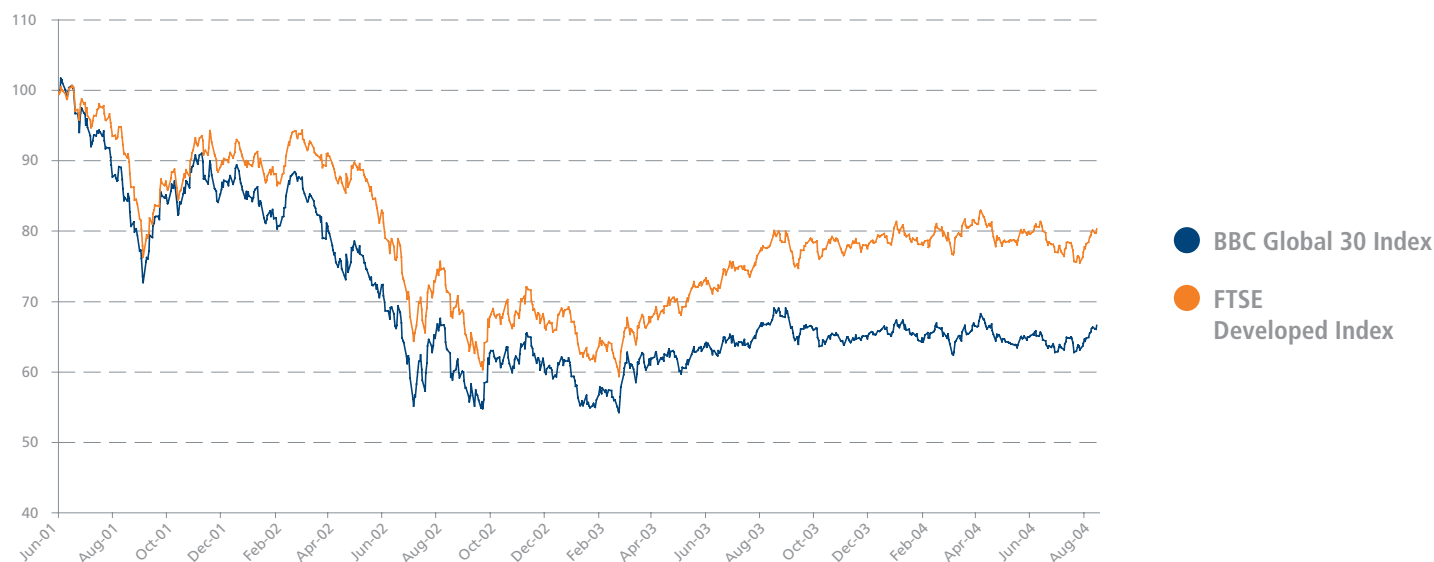

The index will be reviewed on an annual basis in June, providing the followers of the index with a more long-term view of the market.
